

John Frederick Otto Rundle, better known as Fred Rundle, was a great Boer nationalist. He died February 1, 2012

His grandfather (Otto) was with Gen. De la Rey and Siener van Rensburg in a Boer commando against the British; he was later exiled to Ceylon and later returned in southern Africa for to fight under Gen. De la Rey.

As a young man, Fred Rundle became to be involved in politics, in Lichtenburg (western Transvaal). He entered in the Nasionale Party (NP; in English: National Party), and personally knew Dr. Verwoerd and JG Strijdom.

In later years he left Nasionale Party (NP) and entered in the Konserwatiewe Party (KP; in English: Conservative Party). He worked with Dr. Treurnicht, and was appointed leader of the KP in Johannesburg and member of the Transvaal Party Committee. Several times he standing in municipal and parliamentary elections of the RSA for the KP.

After some friction with Ferdi Hartzenberg (the last leader of the KP) and Andries Beyers (at that time, national secretary of the KP), he left the Konserwatiewe Party.

In the early 90's he was appointed spokesman for the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging \(AWB\) . In the mid-90s he was appointed leader of the Afrikaner Volksfront

(AVF; in English: Afrikaner People-Nation Front) for Johannesburg. In the 1994 was chosen, along with two other men, to represent the AWB to the Volksverteenwoordigende Rand (VVR, the Council of Representatives): the Parliament of the "Afrikaner Boer nation", inaugurated by the Afrikaner Volksfront (AVF) the 29th January.

capitalist-communist