

The plea below, translated from Afrikaans, was made by Commandant of Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB, in English: Afrikaner Resistance Movement) for Rustenburg, in early August 2010, before a gathering of the movement in that town.

Questo articolo è disponibile anche in italiano .

Rustenburg will rise up with a clenched fist, covered with the flag of the AWB.

People will see us, the AWB is you, our members.

Together we must rise from the dust that was, we must build, we must protect.

In you, our members, the flame must burn in your heart, the heart of the Boer nation, your wife, your son and daughter, and you grandchildren!

Young boy and girl, you must never forget what your grandfather and grandmother and their people did for us, their blood shed for our nation.

Now, every day we are being slaughtered like dogs, attacked by the guerrilla - day and night!

Be vigilant Boers, stand together, great and small, man and wife, brother and sister!

We do need you!