

Who doesn't know the face of Nelson Mandela? He fought for to establish a communist regime in southern Africa, which chaining together all nations that inhabit it. Well, everyone saw his face, and everyone can recognize him.

But who remembers the face of Boer prisoners? They fought for the freedom of their people. Yet only few are able to recognize them. The communist-capitalist media don't show them, don't publicize them. The centers of supranational power don't support real freedom fighters, but only those who are instrumental to their exploitative policies. Boer nationalists are only shown for to be criminalized, and after being imprisoned are hidden, because they first must be hated, and then must disappear from society and to be erased from memory, as if they never existed. But we must see them for what they really are: freedom fighters, brothers at the forefront. We must love them and support them, for their affiliation and their courage, and involve ourself so freedom give back to them. The same freedom that must be give back to the Boer nation, imprisoned first by Afrikaner regime, and today by that of ANC. Nobody has the right to subjugate other nations. Who fighting for freedom of his nation can't be condemned.
